

SCIENCE FICTION

June/July 2006

ISSN: 1545-

3650

Vol. IV No. 6

AlienSkin Magazine

Exploring The World Of Speculative Fiction

AlienSkin Magazine®

Published Bi-Monthly Online

Up

Alien Fingers

Calling The Dead

Cooking Clones

Discovery

Failure

Happy Birthday, Clandestine

Imminent Domain

The Knight And The Dragon

Lucky

One Man's Poison

The Pink Flamingo

Sanity

This Is Where We Begin

Traveler

The Witch's Instrument

Flash Fiction

Sanity

a poem by Timothy R. Nunes ©2006

It's all relative anyway, isn't it?

Listen.

Can you hear it?

There it is again, faintly perceived within the incessant buzzing.

Beyond the beautiful screams,
Behind the phantasms, bound and gagged,
Beneath the turgid swirls of dripping crimson,
Before the satisfying crunch of the axe, or the sighing sibilance of blade parting flesh.

It's there, trying to break free, to shatter reality.

Words filled with meaning,
Whispered logic,
Weirdly ordered perceptions.

I must run, hide, escape in any way possible.

I can't let it catch me, reshape me, destroy me.

I fear it more than anything else,

Weird But True

In Belfast, Ireland there is a male dog named Zoe that has a persistent, audible hum coming from his head.

That which haunts my waking horrors,
And threatens my most delicious nightmares.

Did You Know ~

There is a mysterious ice mine in Coudersport, PA that grows mammoth icicles and strange ice formations in hot weather, and which thaws out during cold spells.

No, I will resist it to the bitter end... This 'sanity'.

~ Timothy R. Nunes, Illinois ©2006

Copyright since 2002 by Froggy Bottom Press and its Licensors. All rights reserved.

